

National Resource Directory (NRD)

Providing access to thousands of services and resources at the national, state, and local levels to support recovery, rehabilitation, and reintegration

The National Resource Directory (www.NRD.gov) is a federal government website that connects wounded, ill, and injured service members, veterans, families, and caregivers to thousands of services and programs at the national, state, and local levels to support them during recovery, rehabilitation, and reintegration. Visitors to the site will find information on topics such as post-traumatic stress disorder, military and veterans' benefits, health care, educational opportunities, homeless assistance, employment, and more.

Who Operates the NRD?

The NRD is a tri-agency initiative among the Departments of Defense, Labor, and Veterans Affairs. It contains information from federal, state, and local government agencies; veterans service organizations; non-profit, faith-based and community organizations; academic institutions, and professional associations that provide services and assistance to support the military and veteran communities.

Why Was the NRD Created?

The NRD was created because of an increased focus within the federal government to improve wounded, ill, and injured service member, veteran, and family care coordination by providing centralized access to information on related services.

It provides a central place online to obtain comprehensive and up-to-date information about the services and programs available nationally and in the communities where wounded, ill, and injured service members, and their families and caregivers live and work.

As a critical part of this commitment, the NRD is continuously adapting and seeking the most current and highest quality resources available to support those who have served.
