

Recovery Coordination Program:

About the Recovery Coordination Program (RCP)

Delivering non-medical care to wounded, ill, and injured service members across the Military Departments and the Special Operations Command (SOCOM)

Each Military Department and SOCOM Recovery Coordination Program is tailored to meet the unique needs of its recovering service members (RSMs), their families, and caregivers through the continuum of care phases: recovery, rehabilitation, and reintegration - whether that's back to their unit or civilian life.

How are RSMs Referred to the Recovery Coordination Program?

Eligible service members may self-refer or be referred by medical or non-medical support, RCP personnel, or a family member. Contact your Military Department's or SOCOM's RCP for more information:

Air Force Wounded Warrior (AFW2)

Navy Wounded Warrior

Army Recovery Coordination Program (ARCP)

Special Operations Command Care Coalition

Marine Corps Wounded Warrior Regiment

Eligibility for the Recovery Coordination Program

RCPs support wounded, ill, and injured service members who:

- Have a serious injury or illness that is determined to be in the line of duty
- Are unlikely to return to duty within an amount of time specified by their Military Department
- May be medically separated from the military

Support Provided

RSMs are supported by a care management team (CMT) comprised of non-medical, medical, and unit team members. The CMT member composition varies depending on the needs of the RSM, their family, and caregiver; a Recovery Care Coordinator (RCC) leads the non-medical part of the triad.

RCCs conduct a needs assessment that leads to a Comprehensive Recovery Plan (CRP) which provides a holistic blueprint to address the RSM's needs. The CRP encompasses eight pillars: daily living, career, family, finances, health, legal, military, and spirituality. The CRP is reviewed throughout the continuum of care phases to meet the evolving needs of RSMs, their families, and caregivers.
